We are very grateful to the Norwegian Research Council for funding the project in the period 2006-2010 and making possible the publication of the Corpus.

The University of Stavanger has contributed to the project through the funding of smaller subprojects under a scheme for 'Research initiated by females' in 2008 and 2009, as well as through funding for the Programme Area for North Sea Language History, of which the project forms a part. We are also grateful to the Department of Cultural Studies and Languages, University of Stavanger, for providing us with research facilities.

Much of the Eastern material was transcribed in Glasgow during the period 1998-2002, with funding from the AHRB. The Department of English Language, University of Glasgow, has also supported the transcription of Eastern and Southwestern texts.

We would like to thank the Institute for Historical Dialectology, Dept of English Language, University of Edinburgh, for hosting Dr Mäkinen during a five-month stay in the Spring 2007, and for their generous help and cooperation since the beginning of the Project. We would also like to thank the Special Collections Department, University of Edinburgh, for allowing us access to their Middle English microfilm collection and providing much valuable assistance.
