Rune Dahl Fitjar is a Senior Research Scientist at IRIS and project manager of the Regional Innovation Cultures project. He completed his PhD in political science at the London School of Economics in 2007 and has published several international academic journal articles on topics such as regionalism, regional identity and innovation. His first book, The Rise of Regionalism: Causes of Regional Mobilization in Western Europe was published by Routledge in 2009.

Publications:

Book:

Articles in international scientific journals
RD Fitjar and A Rodríguez-Pose (2010): "Innovating in the Periphery: Firms, Values, and Innovation in Southwest Norway". European Planning Studies [accepted].

RD Fitjar (2010): "Little Big Firms? CSR in Small Businesses that don’t Compete against Big Ones". Business Ethics: A European Review [accepted].

Work in progress on innovation
RD Fitjar and A Rodríguez-Pose (2010): "Culture, Cooperation, and Innovation in Norwegian City Regions".